

I am opposed to allowing cell phone usage on planes. Loud obnoxious passengers are annoying enough. But to experience the cacaphony of several passengers yelling in their phones because personal/business problems or because of poor connections is an intrusion into my privacy and quiet space. I fear that you will have verbal and physical confrontation between passengers and between passengers and the flight crew. I don't want to experience that. Thanks but no thanks. I can wait until I get in the terminal.
